

Fairfax Crash Kills Woman CIA Clerk; Driver Slightly Hurt

Miss Patricia F. O'Rourke, 47, of 1349 Rittenhouse street N.W. was killed yesterday in an auto accident in Fairfax County, Va.

Miss O'Rourke, a research clerk for the Central Intelligence Agency, was a passenger in a car which went out of control on Route 674 and crashed into an embankment and a pole.

She was pronounced dead as a result of a skull fracture on arrival at Arlington Hospital about 6 a.m.

Fairfax Police Pmts. Marvin Herrell and Richard Williams reported that Miss O'Rourke was riding in a car driven by James N. Brown, 40, of 700 Jefferson street N.W., a Capital Transit Co. employe. Mr. Brown suffered minor cuts and bruises and was able to walk to a nearby farmhouse to summon aid. The Vienna Rescue Squad responded.

The accident occurred about 4 miles west of Vienna as the two were returning from a housewarming party at Tyson's Corner, Va., police said.

Miss O'Rourke was a native of Sioux City, Iowa, and had held various Government jobs here for the last 10 years.

Police said they notified her parents in Sioux City. They said she also is survived by a brother, the Rev. G. A. O'Rourke of Alvard, Iowa, and a sister, Mrs. Val Hodgeson of Chula Vista, Calif.
